The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-20 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Berger (Porim Technology) in view of Ghosh (JAOCS) and further in view of Babayan (4,952,606).

Berger discloses the use of palm oil in margarine products. The product is made by combining oils from each of the categories set forth in Table 1 and formulated into margarine according to the individual taste of the food product developer. On page 1, the margarine is described as containing a maximum of 16% water, with the remaining portion being fat. On page 5 blends of palm sources from random interesterification are disclosed as known in the art for margarine preparation. The claims appear to differ from Berger in the recitation of the use of enzymatic interesterification. Ghosh teaches that enzymatic interesterification of oils and interesterification palm stearin, specifically, with oil is well known in the art. One of ordinary skill in the art would expect that Berger would be able to treat palm oil products to enzymatic interesterification. The claims also appear to differ from Berger in the inclusion of medium chain triglycerides to the product. Babayan teaches random interesterification of medium chain triglycerides with butter oil to create liquid oil with more than 10% medium chain fatty acids in it. It would have been obvious at the time of applicants' invention to formulate the spread of Berger with the medium chain fats of Babayan to create a butter-like spread with the healthful qualities with the Babayan. It is appreciated that the ratio of (a), (b) and (c) is not mentioned but no unobvious or unexpected result is seen from this feature because Berger provides for a variety of formulations, according to the type of spread that is desired. With regard to claim 3, Babayan provides for random interesterification of medium chain fatty acids so one of ordinary skill in the art would expect that all of the positions on the glycerol molecule would contain a desired level of medium chain fatty acid.

No claim is allowed.
